Public Health Nurses contact mothers who have given birth in Ontario to see how mother and baby are doing and provide information on Public Health services. A postpartum screen is completed to assess if the family has what they need and if they may benefit from additional supports and services. Public Health Nurses are a free resource to answer any questions parents may have.

I consent to share my name, personal information including health card number for myself or baby to Southwestern Public Health for the purpose of having a Public Health Nurse contact me. A Public Health Nurse will ask screening questions and may offer additional supports and services based on my family's needs. All information is confidential and stored in a secure electronic database.

If I do not reside in St. Thomas, Elgin, or Oxford County, I consent to having this information forwarded to my corresponding health unit.
